Subject: I support microsoft breakup.

I feel the people will be best served by splitting microsoft into two companies, one that builds and maintains and improves the operating system and one that does the same with applications that run on top of the operating system.

For definitions of what is "an operating system" and what is "an application", industry leaders, academia and other knowledgeable people should be polled, as its common knowledge in the computer science industry what constitutes each. It is only Microsoft that tries to blur the line between the two.

Thank you,
